INTRODUCTION

ON September 25, 1784, a carter drove up to the elegant Chestnut Street house of John Dickinson, President of the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania, and handed in a note:

Mr Montgomery present his Compliments to his Excellency and request that the books intend by your Excellency as a present to the College at Carlisle be Delivred to the Bearer Mr Sample who will Carrie them Safe to Carlisle.

When Dr. Benjamin Rush urged the foundation of a college at Carlisle he had mixed purposes: to extend 'the empire of reason and science in our country' and to spite the radical Presbyterians who had taken over the College of Philadelphia. When he named the new institution after John Dickinson, he had only one purpose: to secure a benefaction. At first the name 'John and Mary's College Over Susquehanna' had been suggested, but, the analogy with royal William and Mary being inescapable, that was too pretentious for 'The Pennsylvania Farmer' as Dickinson had made himself widely known by his patriotic writings. Indeed, in 1770 he had written to the newspapers on the occasion of his wedding:

I earnestly entreat as a favor of great weight with me that you will not insert in your newspaper any other account of my marriage than this: "Last Thursday, John Dickinson, Esquire, was married to Miss Mary Norris." An account of the expressions of joy shown on the occasion will give me inexpressible pain, and very great uneasiness to a number of very worthy relations.

Dickinson was a wealthy man. He had a lucrative law practice, although in the Revolutionary decade public service occupied much of his time. He owned several farms and considerable other real estate in Pennsylvania and Delaware. Furthermore, his wife was the daughter and sole heiress of Isaac Norris II, a Quaker grandee and one of the richest men of mid-eighteenth-century Philadelphia.

The books packed up in the autumn of 1784 were part of her inheritance and actually her, and not her husband's, gift. They formed only a portion of the extensive library of Isaac Norris II the nucleus of which had come to him from his father, Isaac, but which he had vastly increased.

The senior Norris came to Philadelphia from Jamaica in 1692. Two years later he married Mary Lloyd, the daughter of the acting governor of the province, and embarked upon a mercantile and political career which brought him fortune and honor. He was a member of the governor's council for over twenty-five years, speaker of the Assembly in 1712 and 1720, and mayor of the city in 1724. Although in no sense a scholar or bookman comparable to his close friend and political associate James Logan, Norris was a well-read man who accumulated quite a respectable collection of books.

It was appropriate that a Quaker merchant should have inscribed 'Norris's Library N^o 1' in a copy of Robert Chamberlain's Accomptants Guide or Merchants Book-Keeper, London, 1686. While the library included other 'useful' books, it was comprehensive in scope. When Logan was in London in 1710, he sent his Philadelphia friend the issues of Addison and Steele's Tatler as they appeared. In 1722 Norris ordered from his son then abroad a copy of Milton which arrived in the form of the handsome two-volume quarto printed by Jacob Tonson in 1720. A year later he asked Logan, in London once more, to buy 'Sir Isaac Newton's treatise of Light and Colours'. The book agent pro tem obliged with the third edition of Opticks, London, 1721, whose subtitle reads: A Treatise of Reflections, Refractions, Inflections and Colours of Light. Norris's wish to keep abreast of the scientific knowledge of his day was evidenced by his subscribing for the best and most popular work of its kind, Henry Pemberton's View of Sir Isaac Newton's Philosophy. Taste for another science was personal. The Quaker historian Frederick B. Tolles noted that Norris was something of a hypochondriac, and after a severe attack of gout thought it proper to look 'into Some of the best treatises I could in this country come at on that head', among them George Cheyne's Observations Concerning the Nature and Due Methods of Treating the Gout. His family connections of course knew of Norris's concern about his health; John Moore gave him a copy of Thomas Tryon's Way to Health, Long Life and Happiness, London, 1683.

To serve other needs, the widow of Samuel Carpenter, who had built the impressive Slate Roof House which Norris bought, presented him with John Worlidge's Systema Agriculturae; The Mystery of Husbandry discovered, London, 1681, and he also owned two editions of John Mortimer's Whole Art of Husbandry, London, 1712 and 1716. These probably proved most helpful to Norris when in 1718 he built the splendid mansion Fairhill, north of the city, and laid out the fields and gardens there. Less practical, yet mind-expanding and indicative of the scope of his collection were such works as St. Thomas More's Utopia, London, 1685; Thomas Stanley's History of Philosophy, London, 1660; and John Locke's Some Thoughts on Education, London, 1699, this last given him by Logan. Other titles which he owned have been recorded by Tolles or identified in the Library Company of Philadelphia and University of Pennsylvania Library. Noteworthy is the fact that they are all in English, for Norris was the 'neighbour then in his grand Climacteric' for whom Logan translated Cicero's Cato Major, or his Discourse of Old-Age because his friend was 'not so well acquainted as myself with Roman History and Language'.

By Norris's will, probated in 1735, he left 'those Law books, now with my son Isaac, vallu'd at about fifty Six pounds, which were formerly Lent to David Lloyd and lately return'd by his Widow' in equal parts to his sons Isaac and Joseph. A codicil, written after Joseph's death, gave them all to Isaac. As for his other books, he instructed his wife to divide them among his children as she, with the assistance of his executors James Logan and Israel Pemberton, should 'think Suitable, or Serviceable to their respective Inclinations, or Genius', giving her the right to keep any she wanted for herself and to give away such as his good friends might desire. It is obvious from later notes of ownership that Isaac Norris II got the lion's share of them, but his brother Charles did inherit some. None of the books given by the Dickinsons to the College bears any indication that it was once Norris senior's.

Isaac junior was a man of different attainments. Born in 1701, he received a sound classical education in the Friends' Latin School. He visited England in 1722 and was abroad again from 1727 to 1730, this time travelling both in the British Isles and on the Continent. After his father's death in 1735 he took over the management of the family's business affairs. It must be said that he reluctantly—even though with great success—carried out his responsibilities. The handsome fortune he inherited from his father, as well as the library, he increased.

On June 6, 1739, Norris married James Logan's daughter Sarah, thus uniting through marriage the two most bookish men of colonial Philadelphia. The erudite old bookman said of Isaac: 'If he had as much skill in y^e Greek as he has in the Hebrew he would merit the general reputation of a Learned man.' Perhaps it was at the instance of his father-in-law that he bought the large Geneva Hebrew-Greek Bible of 1618-1619 which he paid Stephen Potts seven shillings for binding in February 1741. The following year the Norries moved from their Second Street house out to the family estate at Fairhill. In the spring of 1744 Isaac wrote Pantaleon Hernandez of Madeira with whom he had long had mercantile dealings:

I now Live ab^t. three Miles from Philad^a on a Seat where my father Spent the last Twenty Years of his Life So that I am in a manner become Useless to the Man in Business.

Within six months thereafter his wife, ailing after the birth of their second daughter, died. The trauma turned one inclined toward withdrawal to the company of books. To his wife's uncle, Dr. William Logan of Bristol, England, he painted himself as a grieving hermit:

The Loss of such a companion will incline me more to my books as I am circumstanced with leisure & a country retreat. I shall continue to add to those I have, and intend to appropriate the interest arising from the mony in thy hands with some I have in London to that purpose.

James Logan, who had despaired of his own children's interest in his rich collection of books, had been heartened by the bibliophilism of his son-in-law. He had the younger man begin a catalogue of the library at Stenton. Logan looked upon Isaac as his intellectual heir.

Alas, the two cresting book streams, without parallel on the Pennsylvania fringe of the British empire, diverged. A disagreement over the inheritance of his deceased wife, the details of which are not known, provoked a break between the ailing patriarch and his promising son-in-law. Logan's library was by his heirs made into a public foundation; Norris was not a trustee. The Loganian Library in 1792 was placed in the care of the Library Company of Philadelphia and has survived virtually intact. Isaac Norris's books, on the other hand, were passed down through his ramified descendants. Except for the Dickinson gift, they ended up in the hands of those who had little regard for their distinguished pedigree. One modern example will suffice. When the Norristown State Hospital (for the mentally ill) appealed on television for books for its inmates, a Norris descendant responded with a shelf of his eighteenth-century ancestor's volumes. Happily, they ended up—exchanged for more appropriate secondhand detective stories—in the Library Company where they are appreciated.

It was as if the incapacity of James Logan and his death in 1751 opened up Isaac's political and bibliophilic careers. In 1750 he was elected speaker of the Pennsylvania Assembly, and—frequently against his inclination—reelected consecutively until 1764 when ill health made further activity on his part impossible. At almost the same time he began to buy books in huge lots, omnivorously. In his account book he listed 335 volumes as 'Books bought at Auction 1750/1' for which he paid Benjamin Franklin and William Griffitts £40.8.0. These may have been among the books advertised in the Pennsylvania Gazette of January 29, 1751, as 'A COLLECTION OF CURIOUS and VALUABLE BOOKS, in most Faculties; viz. Divinity, History, Poetry, Law, Physick, &c. Most of them bound after the best Manner', to be sold in the large room over Mr. Vidal's School in Second Street. On June 28, 1751, Franklin charged Thomas Osborn for having sold at auction a consignment of books, "including all Charges of Cataloguing and Numbering, Printing & dispersing of Catalogues, Advertising, Rent of Auction Room, Pay of Auctioneer, Candles, &c." In Norris's records another list of 186 volumes bought soon after through James Read, a relative of Franklin's wife, at auction for £20.7.9 comes close on the heels of the earlier purchase. And finally, there is a third list, a job lot in small format, 232 of them, bought through Franklin and described as 'a P[ar]cel of Books belonging to T Osborn which I bought at 12^d each Book As the[y] should be delivered in good condition'.

The origin of these books is somewhat confused. On March 16, 1752, Norris wrote a bifurcated letter to Thomas Osborn or John Whiston. As subsequent events proved, it was delivered to the former, a bookseller whose integrity was called into question earlier by Logan and later by Franklin.

J Logan occasionally applied to you both some time before his death when he was enlarging his Library And by his means I formerly had the Harlean (!) Catalogues several Setts of which had been sent him by Thos^s Osborne—I regret my accidental loss of those Catalogues but I have now before me those begun to be sold in May 1749 And the first Part of y^e Catalogues of the Libraries of Edw^d Webbe & others a pretty considerable number of wch I purchased here after they had been first imported into N York but these had been very ill used either by their former Owners, At N Y, or in this place. . . .

A long list of legal and parliamentary titles ordered for the library of the Pennsylvania Assembly in the State House followed.

Osborn had, indeed, sent over to that keen book-buyer James Logan copies of the catalogue of the great library of Edward Harley, Earl of Oxford, which he bought, according to the Philadelphia expert on values, at a bargain price. Further, at the very end of his active career Logan had ordered scores of books from an Osborn Catalogue of Thirty Thousand Volumes from the libraries of William Kynaston, Josiah Martin, who was the Philadelphian's long-time correspondent, and others, advertised to be sold from May 9, 1749, on. The lawyer Edward Webbe's books, together with those from other sources, were included in a catalogue which Osborn announced for sale on March 25, 1751, and Norris also received books from the second part of the libraries of Dr. Edward Chandler, Bishop of Durham, and others sold September 1, 1752.

The London bookseller was not as interested in provenance as have been mid-twentieth-century bookmen. Unsold Harley books appeared erratically in Osborn's subsequent catalogues, and, as Logan earlier noted, he also took remnants of his stock and sold them as Harley's. What was perfectly clear was that the somewhat casual bookseller of Grays' Inn thought that the British colonies were a good dumping ground for otherwise unsalable merchandise. The low prices Norris paid is one indication of that. His dissatisfaction with even job-lot bargains was another, as expressed in a letter of February 1, 1752/3, to Franklin's New York partner, William [James] Parker:

Having by the assistance of a ffr^d purchased some books at an Auction in Philad^a, ab^t a year ago I found many of them belonged to Osborne's Catalogues and were as I suppose such as he could not dispose of in England since these upon examining them I find have been separated so as to break many of the Sets Upon which I bought all the remainder of that parcel in B ffranklin's hands here and by this means made up some of the broken Numbers but I am still defective in a good many—As he now informs me those Books were sent into N York, and part of them afterwards to this place it is very probable the respective sets came from Engl^d compleat and have been parted since.

These at the Vendue cost me ab^t Sixpence and what I bought since a shilling each And as I find many of them are really of little Value or bad Editions and that all of them have been very ill used they turn out dear enough. However to close the sale there as well as here I now offer to be a purchaser for all the remains of that parcel at Nine pence a book d[elivere]d at Philad^a.

No account with Parker has been found; we do not know the upshot of Norris's offer.

Fortunately, surviving books from his library indicate that although Speaker Norris bought bargains in bulk, he also acquired more expensive and more current books piecemeal. In addition to a number of Bibles in various languages, including the Paris 1539 edition of Isaiah in Hebrew, he owned Archibald Bower's History of the Popes, London, 1750–1754, the regicide Edmund Ludlow's Memoirs, London, 1651, and such a classic as the excessively rare first edition of Edward Herbert of Cherbury's De Veritate, [Paris,] 1624, the first metaphysical treatise written by an Englishman. At the same time he ordered a copy of Charles de Montesquieu's influential Spirit of the Laws, Edinburgh, 1750, for the State House Library, he bought one for himself.

His account books show that on April 24, 1761, he paid Peter Lloyd 12/6 for a copy of Thomas Salmon's 'Compendium of Geography', and almost three years later bought from him a Juvenal and Persius printed by Robert Estienne in 1545, Dionysius Periegetes's Orbis Descriptio, and two old school-texts, Epictetus's Enchiridion and the Port-Royalist Nicole's Epigrammatum Delectus, both London, 1659. In February 1763 he noted that Anthony Benezet, the Quaker schoolmaster and humanitarian, got bound for him several volumes of periodicals, the Memoires of Trévoux and the Bibliothèque Britannique. George Reinhold of Germantown latterly did much work for Norris; his simple bindings of three-quarters sheep over marbled boards are quite distinctive. Early in 1764 the aging bookman recorded a long list of books he sent to be bound by Reinhold, including such esoterica as Abraham Ruchat's Lettres et Monumens des trois Pères Apostoliques, Pierre Fresart's Emmenologia, and Palaephatus's De Incredibilibus Historiis. He brought home from the binder in June of the same year eleven other volumes, among them a thick quarto collection of American pamphlets bound together: both parts of Lewis Evans's Geographical, Historical, Political, Philosophical and Mechanical Essays, Philadelphia, 1755-1756; William Smith's History of the Province of New-York, London, 1757; William Livingston's Review of Military Operations in North-America, London, 1757; and William Shirley's self-justification, The Conduct of Major Gen. Shirley, London, 1758.

Norris kept up with the new books being published. In the spring of 1757 he asked Franklin, then in England, to get for him two books that Osborn 'is concerned in', Sir John Hill's Complete Body of Husbandry and his Eden, or a compleat Body of Gardening. He noted that his brother Charles wanted the latter, but 'I would have both the Gardening and Agriculture being much inclined to amuse my Self among my Dirty Acres if I can contrive some way or other to stay a little more at Home.' Just over a year later he thanked Franklin for the present of a copy of Baskerville's elegantly printed, quarto Virgil, and remarked that he thought he had seen 'a Sheet as a Specimen of the Work abt a Year ago and if it had not been put out of my Mind by other Affairs I would have been a Subscriber'. Franklin was to let him know if the printer planned any other editions of the classics in the same type 'that I may have an Opp^g[rtunity]. of contributing my Mite to encourage such a curious and Ingenious Man as Baskerville who has done an Hon^r. to the English Press'. Norris did subscribe to Baskerville's 1758 edition of Milton and received his copy which he sent back to England to be finely bound in morocco.

Meanwhile, Norris had been having a difficult time sorting out his past bulk purchases and coping with new ones. Beginning on November 28, 1757, on twenty folio pages of an old daybook of his father, he catalogued hundreds of books. Odd volumes and duplicates were separately listed. Most of the indicated prices paid ranged from one shilling to two and sixpence; some of the entries were preceded by the 1749 Osborn catalogue number. And still the lump purchases continued. On April 29, 1758, Speaker Norris complained to the distant Franklin that he had been too busy with public affairs to take care of his debts to Osborn and went on abruptly:

ye last Parcel were worthless (both from ye Contents & ye Miserable Condition w^{ch} they were sent to me in). I realy Think they have emptied yr House of all yr Old Books, for many of them were Prim^{rs} out of yr Own Printing Office, Whitefields Journals, old used Gram^{rs} Spell^g Books &c &c, & many of ye others Perfectly Rotten Of w^{ch} I have a Number, w^{ch} you may have ye Pleas^r of Seeing at yr Return—but I hope wthout ye bad Effect I realy believe They had Upon me, for being willing to Take all that could be Used. The Sharpness & Acrid Salts contract^d by Their laying in some damp Place got into my mouth & stomach To such a Degree that At ye begin^g of this Session I could not attend ye House, & it was like to have had worse Effects.

He did not want any mention of his illness made to 'those of my own family Who would be willing to persuade me to relinquish my Books, & use more Bodily Exercise, w^{ch} I think would be no bad Advice, at my Time of life'.

Of the making of catalogues by Norris there seems to have been no end. He was still fussing in August, 1761, when he again wrote to Franklin.

I have set myself A very great Task in ord^r to settle Effectualy ye Acc^o of ye Books I had of Osborn's Parcel, w^{ch} is To Transcribe My Catalogue of Them & w^{ch} would have been needless, had yr Son had Time, as he intend^d To have calld on me, & counted ye Numbers from my lists of Them, with Their Titles. There are some in ye Assembly Library, w^{ch} I will Endeavr to get ye House to Take if they Incline to it, & Then settle wth Them. I have many remain^g After taking al ye Sev[era]l Editions of ye Same Book & Sev^l of ye Same Edition w^{ch} I have given away. Chas^s Thomson had a few of Them; what shall be done with ye Remaind^r; Many are Rotten hav^g been laid in some Celler as I sup^{ose}, & not a few have Their leaves entirely Stuck Togeth^r with Printer's Ink.

No complete catalogue of the library of Isaac Norris II has been discovered, and the vicissitudes of the books after his death on July 13, 1766, are not clear. He left two daughters, Mary and Sarah, but no will. The letters of administration of his estate, which may have contained an inventory of the books, have disappeared from City Hall. Sarah died in 1769, so when Mary married John Dickinson the following year she was the only direct heir. The books were housed in one of the dependencies at Fairhill built for that purpose. John Adams, who visited the library in the autumn of 1774 while he was attending the First Continental Congress, pronounced it 'very grand'. How the books survived the destruction of Fairhill by the British in 1777 is not known. It is possible that the outbuilding in which they were was not burned when the main house was; maybe the volumes were packed up and moved out to safety before the British occupation. In any case, it seems strange that while the Norris books came through the war apparently unscathed, Dickinson's own pre-Revolutionary library seems to have been destroyed.

By the postwar era all the Norris books must have been moved into Dickinson's Chestnut Street mansion and from there the selection for the new college was made. There were several times during the institution's period of gestation when Benjamin Rush and his friends in western Pennsylvania must have regretted the Dickinson name they so hopefully bestowed. No major gift in money was forthcoming. Furthermore, Dickinson wrote a letter to the newly chosen president of the college, the Reverend Dr. Nesbit, advising him not to leave Scotland for Carlisle, a letter which Rush forced Dickinson to retract. John King, one of Dickinson College's original trustees, wrote Rush on January 16, 1785:

It is said the Books presented by the President are a very poor Collection, scarcely one printed within a hundred years past, and of no use, but to take up room. This may raise a surmize that the Name may not be of so great advantage to the Institution as it was by some, expected to be.

In all honesty, it must be admitted that the books Dickinson culled from his father-in-law's collection were ill-suited for a college just beginning. It was an instant rare-book collection when the frontier of America was hardly ready for such a sophisticated concept and when the infant college needed a practical working library for its students. Of the 1,902 titles in 1,750 volumes presently identifiable as Dickinson's gift only a tiny handful is in English and most of these relatively unimportant theological works. All the rest were in Latin and French, with a few in Greek and a scattering in German, Italian, and Dutch. Although the classics were represented, they were in editions not of the latest and best recensions. Indeed, there were among others eight titles by Aristotle and eight by Cicero, copies of Euripides, Virgil, Terence, Tacitus, and Suetonius, only Ovid's Amatoria, Thucydides solely in a French edition, but no Horace. The medical and scientific works were, generally speaking, specialized monographs of a bygone age. There were, it is true, eight different editions of Euclid, but, alas, none in English. What use Dickinson thought the students could make of innumerable works on Socianism, Jansenism, quietism, and other religious movements as argued pro and con by French writers of the seventeenth century cannot be imagined. And in the whole gift there were no folios or large quartos.

So far as they can be identified these are the volumes which Isaac Norris II bought at one time or another as bargains from the London bookseller Osborn. Time and the interests of the twentieth century, however, have transmuted many of them into gold. It was exciting to discover that Giovanni Antonio Valtrino's De Re Militari Veterum Romanorum, Cologne, 1597, had belonged to the dramatist Ben Jonson who wrote on the title page his distinctive motto: 'tanquam Explorator'. Johann Boehm's Omnium Gentium Mores, Leges & Ritus, Freiburg, 1540, and Johann Thomas Freig's Historiae Synopsis, Basle, 1580, both bear the signatures of William Cecil, Lord Burghley, one of the greatest statesmen of the Elizabethan era. The gilt Tudor arms on the sides of the binding of Leonardo Botolli's Commentarioli duo, Alter de medici, alter de Aegroti munere, Lyon, 1565, indicate that the volume was once in a royal library, possibly that of Edward VI. Other books formerly belonged to Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury, the scholarly historian of the Reformation and of his own time; White Kennett, Bishop of Peterborough, antiquarian and pioneer collector of Americana; and Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford, statesman and bibliophile.

Then, too, there are some works printed in Great Britain before 1700 which are apparently very rare indeed and in a few cases seem to have escaped the net of bibliographers. Wing's Short-Title Catalogue does not list Jean de Beaulieu's Catalogue des Livres, London, 1686; his Nouveau Catalogue, London, 1688; Thomas Feyens's De Viribus Imaginationis Tractatus, London, 1657; William Lyndwood's Provinciale Vetus Provinciae Cantuariensis, Oxford, 1644; or Peter Paravicino's Short and Safe Guide . . . of the Italian Tongue, London, 1658. Although they are recorded in the earlier Short-Title Catalogue or, Wing's, very few copies were located of Daniel Tilenius's Paraenesis Ad Scotos, St. Andrews, 1620; Pál Jász-Berényi's Examen Doctrinae Ariano-Sociniana, London, 1662; Thomas Goveanus's Ars Sciendi Sive Logica, London, 1681; Adrianus Heereboord's Philosophus Natvralis, London, 1676; Friedrich Hildebrand's Antiquitates potissimum Romanae, Oxford, 1673; Everard Maynwaring's Solamen Aegrorum, London, 1665 (a presentation copy); and Daniel Sennert's Epitome Naturalis Scientiae, Oxford, 1664.

For today's student of French religious history, there exists a rich corpus of seventeenth-century material. There are no less than ten books by Jean La Placette, the Protestant theologian and moralist, an equal number by the Port-Royalist logician Antoine Arnauld, who defended Jansenism against the Jesuits and attacked Protestantism with equal fervor, and fourteen by Pierre Jurieu, a learned opponent of the Port Royalists. Many of the works were written by men such as Jean Claude and Pierre Bayle who fled to Holland after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. Amid the welter of polemical treatises, each sect claiming for itself the only knowledge of the true faith, it is somewhat amusing to find among the Norris books two copies of the anonymous Moyens Surs & Honnestes Pour la Conversion De tous les Heretiques, Cologne, 1681. Typical of the more spiritual works, which later found favor with both Quakers and Methodists in America, was Jeanne Marie Guyon's Recueil de divers traitez de theologie mystique, Cologne, 1699.

Belief in the supernatural was still widespread when Levinus Lemnius's De Miraculis Occulitis Naturae, Antwerp, 1581, appeared; there are two other editions of that popular work in the collection. And witchcraft, now probably more popular as a subject of investigation than when the library first arrived at Dickinson, can be examined in two of the standard books of their era, Johann Wier's De Praestigijs Daemonum, Basle, 1566, and Jean Bodin's De la Demonomanie Des Sorciers, Antwerp, 1586, as well as the century-later François Perrault's Demonologie Ov Traitte Des Demons Et Sorciers, Geneva, 1653.

The old alchemists were not as successful in turning lead into gold as modern bookmen have been in turning their writings into paper currency. Among those which Dickinson gave the college were Johann Rudolph Glauber's De Auri Tinctura, Amsterdam, 1651, and six other pieces by the German chemist, a number of the alchemical and hermetical writings by the physician Pierre Jean Fabre, all published at Toulouse from 1628 to 1645; the great eighth-century Arabian Geber's De Alchemia Traditio, [Strasbourg,] 1598; Ramón Lull's Secreta Secretorum, Cologne, 1592; the Rosicrucian Michael Maier's Tractatus Posthumus, sive Ulysses, Frankfurt, 1624; and Michael Sendivogius's Novum Lumen Chymicum, Geneva, 1628. In the area of less arcane but more practical science some of the well respected early texts were in the gift, such as Girolamo Cardano's De Subtilitate, Lyon, 1580; André Tacquet's Elementa Geometriae, in triplicate; Gaspar Schott's Arithmetica Practica, Wurzburg, 1663; Jacques Rohault's Traité de Physique, which was represented by five editions from 1683 on, three in French and two in Latin; Jean Le Clerc's Physica, in four editions; and the highly regarded Nicolas Lémery's Cours de Chymie, Paris, 1697.

These compendiums were supplemented by a number of monographs which made significant contributions to knowledge, for example, in the field of astronomy, the great cartographer Nicolaus Mercator's Institutionum Astronomicarum Libri Duo, London, 1676; the immortal Galileo Galilei's Systema Cosmicum, London, 1663; Pierre Gassendi's Institutio Astronomica, London, 1683; and Jacques Bernoulli's Conamen Novi Systematis Cometarum, Amsterdam, 1682. Pascal's law on the pressure of liquids was enunciated in his Traitez De L'Eqvilibre Des Liquevrs, Et De La Pesantevr De La Masse De L'Air, Paris, 1663. Among the Norris books are Charles Estienne's Seminarium Et Plantarivm fructiferarum, Paris, 1540, and De Re Hortensi, Paris, 1545. A sprinkling of other botanical books is to be found, including Robert Morison's Hortus Regis Blesensis Auctus, London, 1669; Antoine Mizaud's Historia Hortensivm, Cologne, 1577; Paul Hermann's Florae Lugduno-Batavae Flores, Leyden, 1690; and two copies of Joseph Pitton de Tournefort's Schola Botanica, Amsterdam, 1689.

Of all the sciences, however, medicine is most copiously represented, a choice which has been laid to the hypochondriacal nature which Isaac junior inherited from his father. A rarity is James Primrose's De Vulgi In Medicina Erroribus, London, 1638, an attack upon Harvey's description of the circulation of the blood. More positive contributions to medicine were William Briggs's pioneering Nova Visionis Theoria, London, 1685; and his Ophthalmographia, London, 1687; Richard Morton's study of tuberculosis, Phthisiologia, London, 1689; the Jesuit philomath Athanasius Kircher's microscopical observations in his Scrutinium Physico-Medicum Contagiosae Luis, Leipzig, 1659; the great Danish physician Nicolaus Steno's Observationes Anatomicae, Leyden, 1662; and that classic of the iatrochemical school, Frans de Le Boë's Praxeos Medicae Idea Nova, Leyden, 1672-1671. There were editions of the still much esteemed Hippocrates in Greek and French, and four printings of Lazare Rivière's Praxis Medica.

But the works of Englishmen were unusually well represented: the pediatric manual, Walter Harris's De Morbis Acutis Infantum, London, 1689; the authority on melancholy Timothy Bright's Hygieina, Mainz, 1647; the vegetable physiologist Nehemiah Grew's Tractatus de Salis Cathartici Amari, London, 1695; and Francis Glisson's Anatomia Hepatis, London, 1654. To be sure, books by the most popular of English seventeenth-century doctors, Thomas Sydenham, were in the collection in the form of four small monographs and his frequently reprinted Opera, London, 1705, as were the Institutiones Medicae, Leyden, 1713, and Aphorismi, Leyden, 1722, of Herman Boerhaave, the shining star of the medical school at Leyden.

It is impossible within the limits of an introduction to do justice to all the volumes which might deserve notice. However, the scope and miscellaneous quality of the Norris books at Carlisle can be suggested in a few examples. Writing of the textbooks used at Harvard in the seventeenth century, Samuel Eliot Morison cited a number of the works also to be found in the Dickinson collection: the perennial manual of rhetoric, Aphthonius's Progymnasmata; standard books on logic such as Franco Burgersdijck, Institutionum Logicarum

Libri Duo (five copies in the Norris lot), Adrianus Heereboord's Logica, and Pierre La Ramée's Dialectica; handbooks of mathematics including William Oughtred's Clavis Mathematicae and Gasper Schott's Cursus Mathematicus; and the most popular of compendiums, Johann Magirus's Physiologiae Peripateticae libri sex.

While there are not many books of travel Juan Gonzalez de Mendoza's Historia De Las Cosas Mas Notables del grā Reyno de la China, Medina del Campo, 1595; Sigmund von Herberstein's Rerum Moscoviticarum Commentarij, Antwerp, 1557; Levinus Apollonius's De Peruuiæ Regionis rebus in eadem gestis, Antwerp, 1566 and 1567 (two editions); and William Penn's Recueil De Diverses Pieces, Concernant La Pensilvanie, The Hague, 1684, are worthy of mention. The celebrated Dutch statesman-scholar Hugo Grotius, whose treatise on international law long remained a standard text, was the author of twelve books in Dickinson's collection. There were not many works on military matters and so it is surprising to find Flavius Vegetius's L'Arbre des batailles Et fleur de cheualerie, Paris, 1527, and the more modern Claude François Milliet de Chales's L'Art De Fortifier, Paris, 1684. Petroleum in Norris's day played no role in the economy of nations; one wonders why he owned two copies of Francesco Ariosto's De oleo montis Zibinii, seu Petroleo Agri Mutinensis, Modena, 1698, an account of oil found near Modena. More influential in the eighteenth century was Hubert Languet's Vindiciae Contra Tyrannos, Edinburgh [Basle], 1579, the first edition of a strong statement of democratic principles which formed part of the base of the English Whig's political philosophy. Note, too, should be made of Gottfried Wilhelm von Leibnitz's Essais De Theodicée, Amsterdam, 1710. Finally, Dickinson sent to the young college a number of book catalogues of great bibliophilic interest: the Amsterdam booksellers' Catalogus Librorum of 1698, Philip Lea's Catalogue of Globes, Spheres, Maps, Mathematical Projections, Books and Instruments of 1703, and, among others, the sales of the libraries of Sir Charles Scarborough, physician to Charles II and James II, and Bishop Tillotson.

Esoteric as the titles cited may sound to the modern ear and esoteric as they must have appeared to the trustees of a new college not far from the western frontier, they were familiar in a scholarly sense to Isaac Norris. In volume after volume, usually on a front flyleaf, he wrote extensive biographical and bibliographical notes. For example, in his Galilei he copied out from the Bibliotheque Universelle a passage recounting the scientist's arrest by the Inquisition, imprisonment, and subsequent recantation, and from Johann Christoph Sturm's Philosophia Eclectica an amusing quotation from Riccioli concerning Galilei's confrontation with a Paduan professor. Norris was interested and reference-book-competent enough to have found information concerning the life of the not very famous Wolfgang Jobst which he prefixed to his Academiarvm et Praestantivm Qvarvndam Scholarvm fundatarum Catalogus, Frankfurt an der Oder, 1556.

Not only was the Philadelphia politician able to attribute Les Conformitez des Ceremonies Modernes avec les Anciennes, [Paris,] 1667, to its author, Pierre Mussard, but he was able to discover biographical details concerning him in Bayle's Oeuvres and the periodical Bibliotheque Britannique. Almost all the citations are in Latin or French, both of which languages Norris had full control of, but an unusual one in English gives the flavor of the others. The bottom half of the title page of Silvester Petra Santa's Notae in Epistolam Petri Molinaei ad Balzacum, Antwerp, 1634, was missing. Norris pasted in a blank to fill it out, completed the last missing line of the title, added the imprint and copied out a passage from Bayle's life of Du Moulin:

The Jesuit Petra Sancta in the Year 1634 Published some notes upon a Letter of Du Moulin's to Balzac, and subjoined a Confutatⁿ. The confutation of certain Things wh^e that Minister had told him Concerning the Ceremonies of Rome with regard to the Installatiō of the Pope, among other Things he has not forgot y^e perforated Chair. And in a few words takes occasion to refute the Story of the Female Pope. Du Moulin replied to him and set apart a whole chapter to justifie what he had concerning the ceremonies of the Instalation of the Pope, but he says not one word either of the perforated chair or the female Pope.

The books which John Dickinson sent to Carlisle in 1784 are more a monument to Isaac Norris's erudition than to the donor's generosity. While they are only a portion of the library which Norris accumulated, it is the largest portion which has survived. At first they proved of little practical value for the students of Dickinson College, but now they lend color and prestige to the college's rare-book collection. The publication of this catalogue will make them known to a wider scholarly public which may be expected to make pilgrimages to Carlisle to do research with titles not available elsewhere in America. Isaac Norris would be pleased.

FOREWORD

IN 1866 Professor John Keagy Stayman, in his annual librarian's report to the Dickinson College Board of Trustees, petitioned them to grant him funds to print 'a full catalogue of all the Books for which there is a frequent inquiry, and which would add very much to the use of the Library and the character of the College among Literary men visiting us, who are astonished to find us with so large a number of ancient valuable and rare books and yet without any printed guide book to the learning which loads our shelves'. Included with his report now in the College Archives were the letters of inquiry he had cited, among them one written in 1865 by Isaac Norris, M.D., of Philadelphia, a grandnephew of Isaac Norris II, whose books are herein presented.

It was not surprising that Dr. Norris and others should assume that Dickinson had a printed catalogue of its Library. Fifteen American colleges and universities had issued such catalogues by 1866, only three of which, Harvard in 1723, 1725, 1735, and 1773, Yale in 1743, and 1755, and Princeton in 1760, were published before John Dickinson selected the books from the Norris Library at Fairhill which were to come to Dickinson. Now at last the College has a printed book catalogue of this major portion of its original library whose arrival and subsequent care on the campus can be traced in the College's archival records.

John Dickinson was not in Carlisle on September 29, 1784, to preside at the Board meeting but word of his gift of books had already been received. Benjamin Rush had written to fellow trustee John King, April 2, 1783, that 'our beloved President has promised us 500 volumes' from the library of his late father-in-law. Three trustees at that meeting were appointed to receive, store, and take care of any books which would be sent to the College. They were also instructed to respond to Principal Charles Nisbet's letter from Scotland which contained an acceptance of his appointment as well as a postponement of his coming in order 'to prepare especially for the Importation of books, a matter of vast Importance to the Seminary of Learning'. A somewhat apologetic answer was sent back, ' . . . as we are but beginning. We have as yet no philosophical apparatus. We have a collection of valuable Books presented by the President and others.' Accounts for freight and portage of the books in September and October of 1784 show further evidence of the gift. Public notice of it came in the Pennsylvania Gazette of October 27, 1784, which announced the College's receipt of 'the principal part of the library of the late Isaac Norris, Esq. consisting of about 1500 volumes upon the most important subjects'.

In the spring of 1784, Benjamin Rush had begun soliciting books in earnest as he wrote John Coakley Lettsom urging him and others to send even the 'sweepings' of their libraries for 'our illiterate wooden country'. Such appeals brought volumes from England's Dr. Lettsom, Granville Sharp, and Dr. Richard Price, from Dr. John Erskine in Scotland, and from a host of prominent Philadelphians. These gifts in addition to at least three times as many as at first promised by John Dickinson called for the appointment of a Librarian. On June 15, 1785, the Board appointed classicist James Ross, who had been elected the College's first Professor the previous year, having been brought from Philadelphia in 1780 to teach in its Grammar School. It was fitting to choose a first librarian who could read the books. Ross was directed by the Board 'to draw out a regular Catalogue of the Books' taking care to keep strict account of two-week loans to patrons and to collect one shilling per quarter of the year from borrowers. James Ross resigned as Librarian in May of 1786 presumably having produced no catalogue but twelve of his own Latin textbooks in later years. In a postscript of an April 14, 1786, letter to John Dickinson, Rush wrote of the influx of boxes of books from London and that the College now had a Library of 2,700 volumes. It was not until 1791 that Yale's catalogue could boast a library of the same size.

The first College building measured only sixty by twenty-three feet with three rooms for classes and a fourth room long unfinished for the Library. An unhappy Charles Nisbet in his November 13, 1786, report to the Trustees lamented the 'mean appearance' of the accommodations for the students which he had described as a 'hogpen'. Worst of all the Library was 'shut up and rendered useless, no Keeper being appointed to take Care of the Books'. It was a far cry from Norris's Fairhill. Nevertheless Carlisle Trustee John Armstrong bravely announced on the inside cover of the Columbian Magazine for February 1787 that 'the library already consisted of two thousand seven hundred and six volumes, in the Hebrew, Latin, English, French, Low Dutch and Italian languages, the donations of gentlemen in England, Scotland and Philadelphia'.

In the next two decades the Norris Library at Dickinson was to survive a rapid turnover of librarians, faulty security systems, and a fire in 1803 destroying 'the new and elegant College building' which had scarcely been occupied. This period was also to bring the creation of the more modern and popular society libraries, the students' answer to inadequate college libraries in many early American institutions of higher education. The Union Philosophical (1789) and the Belles Lettres (1786) Literary Society Libraries were founded at Dickinson in 1791.

In the fall of 1805 the Trustees arranged for the Library to be moved into 'the new edifice' designed by Benjamin Latrobe and later called West College. The books undoubtedly remained there undisturbed and eclipsed by the growing society libraries at least until 1831 when Charles Dexter Cleveland reported as Librarian, continuing the tradition by statute of the Professor of Languages acting in this dual capacity. His ambitions for the Library included a new catalogue of only those works which would be useful to the students, classified according to subject. What appears to be his manuscript catalogue on fourteen folio pages in the Archives lists 'the Books in Dickinson College library to which the students have access', arranged by size. Few Norris books are included.

Rules for this period provided for the Library to be open one hour a week on Saturday afternoons. One librarian charged his borrowers 3d per book checked out, an ingenious attempt to subsidize his own services. Such circulation policies served for years as preservation insurance for the Norris books.

Methodism which revived the College in 1833 brought a new brand of modern librarianship at the hands of Professors Robert Emory and John McClintonck. Emory in his librarian's report of 1835 was critical of the earlier segregation of the 'ancient' books from the modern works. Admitting that the modern works constituted but a small part of the Library, he intended to make a catalogue of the whole. In spite of the limitations of working in an unheated library room in the third story of the College building he was able to make a satisfactory progress report in the summer of 1837. He and his friend and colleague John McClintonck, both then twenty-three, had moved the Library down to a more suitable room on the first floor, and adopted an entirely new arrangement which distributed the books into ten divisions according to subject. Modern cataloguers have not shared his enthusiasm for the identifying stamp he created with 'Dickinson College Library' spelled in a circle to be stamped on the title page and the last page of every book. Charles W. Pitman, the senior who carried out this operation, too often obliterated the name of a former owner or part of an imprint on a Norris book. A label was also affixed to the spine of all books indicating subject division and shelf number. Thus St. Augustinus's Quaestionum Euangeliorum, Libri duo, Cologne, 1530, shown in an illustration, bears a label with '1' for the subject (Theology) with a '5' beneath it to indicate the shelf location. The 'large and substantial folio register' listing all of the books is in the Archives.

Emory's 1837 report also included an inventory of the Library totalling 3,063 volumes. The three largest categories of the ten were Theology and Ecclesiastical History with 720 volumes, Law and Politics with 570, and Medicine and Chemistry with 385. He indicated that of the medical and chemical books, 35 were from the sixteenth century, 244 from the seventeenth, 53 from the eighteenth, and 4 from the nineteenth. Undoubtedly these were principally Norris books.

Robert Emory was to become Dickinson's ninth president in 1845 and to support the efforts of McClintock who became Librarian as well as Professor of Languages when the Library together with the Museum, under the care of Spencer Fullerton Baird, was moved out of Old West into more commodious quarters in South College. Their pupil James William Marshall, just graduated in 1848, succeeded as Librarian. He was to go on in the consular service and as Postmaster General under Grant after his fifteen years as Professor of Latin and Greek at the College. One can imagine Marshall consulting his predecessors before sending Dickinson's contribution to Charles Coffin Jewett's 1850 report as Librarian of the Smithsonian Institution on the public libraries of the United States. Dickinson then reported a library of 14,550 volumes which included the two society libraries, virtually duplicates of each other and each equal in size to the College Library. Only the Library Company and the American Philosophical Society Libraries in Philadelphia exceeded Dickinson's in number of volumes among all public libraries in the Commonwealth.

Marshall reported to Jewett that the books were arranged by subject 'following the system of Brunet'. Within the next decade James Marshall created a thirteen-volume manuscript catalogue, patterned after the system used by Jewett himself in his Brown University Catalogue of 1843 in which books were listed under ten broad subjects but each book was also given a subject word-entry and these were arranged alphabetically. It seemed a regression from Emory's catalogue which listed authors alphabetically under each subject, a nearer step to a full dictionary catalogue, but the Jewett arrangement anticipated modern subject entries. Alas, most of the Norris books were passed over in the Emory catalogue, having given way to a new sectarian surge of Methodistica in Marshall's catalogue.

When Dickinson's first Library building was built in 1886, the Norris books were moved to its new shelves in the Bosler Memorial Library. Card catalogues, having gone public by the 1870's, were becoming widely popular by the time James Henry Morgan, Adjunct Professor of Greek and later President of Dickinson, was busily preparing one for the new library, according to Trustee Minutes for June 22, 1886. The small (three-by-one-inch) cards have survived only for volumes which some later librarian had judged were a part of the 'Original College Library'. For the first time all three libraries were gathered together in one place, nearly 30,000 volumes, duplicates included.

It was soon after May Morris's accession as Librarian in 1927 that she directed the removal of the books of the 'Original Dickinson College Library' from the regular stacks and shelved them behind closed glass doors. She reported to President Morgan in 1934 the completion of her project, noting that there were about 1,600 volumes in this collection, 400 of which bore Isaac Norris's bookplate. All had been vigorously cleaned and treated with leather preservative under her direction. The ubiquitous Morgan, whose own working excursion into the library in 1886 had led to trustee mutterings about precious time taken from his teaching, was critical of the student and librarian hours Miss Morris spent on the project. This view changed as he observed the delight of others at seeing the impressive remnant of the 1784 library shelved apart.

By 1947 the Spahr Room of the library housed the Dickinson-Norris collection as well as its growing collection of manuscripts and archives. In that same year Assistant Librarian James W. Phillips published his 'The Sources of the Original Dickinson College Library' (Pennsylvania History, Vol. xiv, no. 2, pp. 108-117) which showed the work being done in the library to restore and research its origins.

In 1956 Charles Coleman Sellers, who had come in 1949 as Curator of Dickinsoniana, succeeded May Morris as Librarian, and inaugurated a project which brought Mildred Herrick here from January to March of 1957 to complete the recataloguing of 360 titles in 307 Norris volumes.

When the Boyd Lee Spahr Library was built in 1967, Charles Sellers planned the May Morris Room with its adjacent vault and stacks to house the Library's Special Collections. Its reading room was lined with handsome locked glass shelves to contain the Norris books for all to see.

The College in its bicentennial celebration in 1973 found an appropriate focus in a project to complete the recataloguing of the Dickinson-Norris books in card and printed book. Through the good offices of Paul Kaylor, coordinator of Dickinson's bicentennial program, and aided by Judge Robert Lee Jacobs, '32, a grant was secured from the Bicentennial Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, chaired by Lieutenant-Governor Ernest P. Kline. This grant of $21,375 in addition to a gift of $10,000 from the Pew Memorial Trust made the Norris Project a reality. The College committed matching funds toward completion of a card catalogue of the Norris books and for publication of this volume. Cordelia M. Neitz, the Library's rare-book cataloguer, was commissioned to complete the card catalogue. Paul E. Kaylor, George Allan, Dorothy W. Bowers, Susan Conrad, Leonard G. Doran, Yates M. Forbis, and Martha C. Slotten served as a committee to oversee the publication of this book. It drew upon the resources of the Library Company of Philadelphia in bringing Marie E. Korey to campus in 1974-1975 to compile the entries for the catalogue and to serve as editor. She brought more than a nodding acquaintance with Isaac Norris's father-in-law, James Logan, and his books to her formidable bibliographic task in the Morris Room. The College is also grateful to Edwin Wolf 2nd, Librarian of the Library Company, for his counsel and his erudition in the planning and publication of the Norris Catalogue. Charles Coleman Sellers provided quiet but invaluable assistance for the project he had initiated in this cooperative venture between Carlisle, Philadelphia, and the Commonwealth. It lacked only James Ross who might have given us the rest of the titles under his care in 1784.

PREFACE

IN 1784 John Dickinson presented to Dickinson College books selected from the library of his father-in-law, Isaac Norris. These books, which were the foundation of the College's Library, represent a substantial portion of Isaac Norris's own collection. As such, they are a record of his erudition and interests.

The compilation of the catalogue of the books of Isaac Norris at Dickinson College had presented a problem. There is no contemporary list of John Dickinson's gift of 1784. Nor is there any known catalogue of Norris's entire collection. The eighteenth- and nineteenth-century catalogues of the College's Library are of little assistance since they do not indicate Norris's ownership. In the 1930's, the books believed to be part of the College's original library were segregated from the rest of the College's collection.

Norris used several methods to indicate his ownership of a volume. Some of his books have a paper label, lettered by him, pasted over the binder's title on the spine. On the books bound in vellum, Norris often wrote the title directly on the spine. The presence of marbled endpapers is another sign of Norris's ownership. He usually required them in the books he had bound for himself by Christopher Reinhold of Germantown. Often, he added them to books already bound.

Isaac Norris had an armorial bookplate, engraved by James Turner, which he placed in many of his books. He wrote his signature inside the front cover or on the title-page of some. Frequently his books contain notes in his hand. Sometimes, the only evidence of his ownership is his notation on a flyleaf of the number and price from sale catalogues of Thomas Osborn in which Norris found the books listed. On the pages where he made notes, Norris usually added a border in red ink.

Most of the 'Norris' books at Dickinson College contain signs of his ownership. However, broken spines, missing covers, and missing endpapers have made it difficult to identify others as Norris books. These books are included in the present catalogue unless there is evidence which would make Norris's ownership impossible. Two books included here were not part of the gift of 1784. Grotius, The Truth of Christian Religion, London, 1680, and Sparrow, A Rationale upon the Book of Common-Prayer, London, 1668, remained in family hands until 1958 when they were given to Dickinson College by Catherine Armatte Ellis. Both books contain John Dickinson's signature as well as signs of Norris provenance. In all, 1,902 titles in 1,750 volumes at Dickinson College have been identified as probably belonging to Isaac Norris and are catalogued here.

The Norris account books in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and the Library Company of Philadelphia contain four lists which itemize Norris's major book purchases from 1750/1 to 1757. In these, Norris recorded the titles, places of imprint, dates, and prices of each volume. Every title in the lists has been checked against the Norris books at Dickinson College. The presence of a title in the manuscript lists verified Norris's ownership of volumes lacking other signs of provenance. In the present catalogue, the manuscript lists are cited by year and their locations in the account books are given. Since the bibliographical information is repetitive, the titles, imprints, and dates are not quoted. The price which Norris paid is quoted as it is given in the account books. The citation in Botallo, Commentarioli duo, Lyon, 1565, for example, '1750/1 list [p 48] "1-"' indicates that this title appears in the 1750/1 list, on page 48 of the account book, and that Norris paid one shilling for it.

Each entry in this catalogue consists of the author's name, the title of the book, and the place, printers' and publishers' names, and the date from the imprint. The size of the book—4to, 8vo, etc.—is followed by a description of the present binding. All evidence of provenance earlier than Norris is noted. Brief biographies of identifiable former owners are given in an appended provenance index. The presence of Norris's bookplate, signature, notes, and other signs of ownership is indicated. Entries in the manuscript lists are cited and some bibliographical references are given.

Titles are entered literally from the books, but are not always transcribed in full. Authors' names and honorifics are usually omitted. All omissions except at the end of a transcription are indicated by an ellipsis. Places of printing are given in English usage. Printers' and publishers' names are copied literally from the imprint with addresses omitted. Dates are transliterated into Arabic numerals when necessary.

The sizes of the books are given as the sheets were folded and not as gatherings were put together, i.e., 8vo, not 8vo in fours. No collations are included except to note defects. Each book was collated in full by gatherings and pages.

Spines showing Isaac Norris's method of labeling

While the presence of Norris's manuscript label, marbled endpapers, book-plate, and signature serves to identify his books, his notes indicate the use he made of the books. Frequently the notes are lengthy quotations from reference books or notices in periodicals about the book and its author. Sometimes they are merely citations to these works. In some of his books, Norris added marginal comments and corrected the errata. None of the notes is quoted in full here. Some are summarized and the rest are indicated.

The notation in Norris's books of the number and price from the sale catalogues of Thomas Osborn is quoted here. In some, the price was entered in pencil, possibly by a clerk in Osborn's bookshop, and Norris added the catalogue number only. When the pencil notation of the price was not present in a volume, Norris added both the number and the price. Most of the numbers are from the 1749 Osborn catalogue of the libraries of William Kynaston, Josiah Martin, and others. Occasionally Norris copied a number incorrectly. When this occurs, the number as it appears in the 1749 catalogue is listed here after the number given by Norris. Norris was not always careful to distinguish editions. He often cited the same number from the 1749 catalogue for two or three different editions of a work. A few numbers are from the 1752 Osborn catalogue of the libraries of Dr. Edward Chandler and others. Although most of the numbers listed by Norris appear in these two catalogues, there are some which have not been identified.

The bibliographies cited as references are listed below. They are by no means the only bibliographies consulted in compiling this catalogue. The catalogues of the British Museum, the Bibliothèque Nationale, and the Library of Congress were used extensively. However, it seemed rather pointless to list volumes and pages from these catalogues. Entries from Wing are from the second edition through the letter 'E'. An asterisk after the Wing number indicates a difference between the imprint listed in Wing and that in the Norris book.

I would like to express my gratitude to the members of the Norris Committee for their interest and support in the publication of this catalogue. Special thanks go to Martha C. Slotten and the staff of the Morris Room, Danna L. Spitzform, Gail L. Dennis, and Catherine S. Montague for their unsparing assistance during the project. Most importantly, I am profoundly grateful to Edwin Wolf 2nd for his encouragement, guidance, and advice in the planning and publication of this catalogue.

Galilée ^{avait été dénoncé à l'Inquisition des l'année} 1613 ^{pour avoir enseigné, que le Soleil est immobile dans le} Centre du Monde et que la Terre tourne autour de lui. Ses ^{liseurs avoient trouvé cette opinion non seulement absurd} et fausse en Philosophie, mais encore erronée en la foi; mais alors on s'étoit contenté de censurer l'opinion, sans causer d'autre chagrin à son Auteur, qui étoit estimé de plusieurs Cardinaux, et cheri du Pape Urban VIII. ^{quelque temps après} On scut qu'il ne le fût de dogmatizer, et la Congregation tenue devant le Pape en 1616, ordonna au Cardinal Bellarmi de faire venir Galilée chez lui pour lui faire des remonstrances en particulier, et pour le porter à se défaire volontairement de son opinion. ^{Après plusieurs autres formalitez ayant} mis aux jour Ses Dialogues du Système du Monde en 1632 il fut cité devant le Tribunal de l'Inquisition et renfermé dans ses prisons. On le déclara suspect et atteint d'Hérésie touchant le mouvement de la Terre et le repos du Soleil, et on lui signifia qu'en consequence, il avoit encouru toutes les censures et toutes les peines des sacrez Canons. Mais on lui fit la grace de lui en promettre l'absolution pourvu qu'il abjurât et detestât de bon coeur les erreurs susdites, en presence de Ses Juges. Galilée se soumit à ce jugement qui fut rendu le 22. de Juin 1633 et fut élargi et renvoyé de la prison de Juillet par les sollicitations du Due de Toscane.
